

The background of the entire page is teal and decorated with various colorful pills and capsules. At the top, there are a purple pill with a white line, an orange pill, and a blue and pink capsule. On the left, there is a pink pill. In the middle-left, there is a blue pill and an orange pill. On the right, there is a blue pill. At the bottom-left, there is a blue and pink capsule and a blue pill. At the bottom-right, there is a dark blue pill. The main text is centered and reads: 'Are your medicines working for you?' in white. The word 'working' is significantly larger than the other words and features a circular arrow icon around the letter 'o'. A large, dark blue question mark is positioned behind the word 'working'.

When you're taking multiple medicines it can be difficult to know if all those medicines are still doing what they need to do.

Ask yourself, are your medicines working for you?

A graphic consisting of three stacked white arrow-shaped boxes pointing to the right. Each box contains a word in teal, bold, sans-serif font: 'HERE' in the top box, 'TO' in the middle box, and 'HELP' in the bottom box.